1700s

This map shows a typical 1700s 'Formal' layout to Dalzell Estate. Walks, avenues and views are laid out in geometric shapes, according to the fashion of the day. Baron's Haugh is not yet filled in with water, and was quite possibly farmed at this point. If you look closely, you can see some parts of the estate, like the approach roads to the house and the avenue along the Clyde, that are still there today.
